Price Overview

The price of ladder-type cable trays varies significantly based on material and design. Common materials include galvanized steel, stainless steel, aluminum, and plastic, with galvanized steel being the most cost-effective for heavy-duty applications, while stainless steel and aluminum are more expensive due to corrosion resistance and lightweight properties. Ladder trays generally cost more than perforated or wire mesh trays because they support heavier cables and provide better airflow.

Additional Cost Factors

Surface finish: Hot-dip galvanizing (HDG) is more durable and slightly more expensive than pre-galvanized or powder-coated finishes. Fittings and accessories: Elbows, tees, and supports are priced per unit and add to the total cost. Shipping and labor: Heavier trays increase transport costs, and installation requires skilled labor, which can vary regionally.

Practical ConsiderationsLadder-type trays are preferred for industrial and outdoor projects due to their open structure, which allows better ventilation, corrosion resistance, and easy cable routing. They also simplify maintenance and future upgrades, making them a cost-effective long-term solution despite higher upfront costs. In summary, for an Austrian ladder-type cable tray, expect $2–$25 per meter, with the final price influenced by material, finish, length, and additional fittings or installation requirements.
