Factors Affecting Cable Tray Prices

Material: Stainless steel (SS304/SS316) and aluminum are more expensive than mild steel or PVC. Duty Rating: Light-duty trays (13–25mm) are cheaper, while medium and heavy-duty trays (50–100mm+) cost more due to higher load capacity. Size and Length: Wider and longer trays increase material costs.

Standard lengths are typically 2–3 meters. Type: Ladder, perforated, wire mesh, and FRP trays have different manufacturing costs. Wire mesh and FRP trays are often more expensive due to specialized fabrication.

Accessories: Covers, tees, elbows, joint plates, and earth links add to the total cost.

Price Estimates

While exact prices vary by supplier and project requirements, typical ranges in Singapore are: PVC or light-duty trays: SGD 20–50 per meterMild steel or aluminum medium-duty trays: SGD 50–120 per meterStainless steel heavy-duty trays: SGD 150–300+ per meterWire mesh or FRP trays: SGD 200–400 per meter depending on size and coatingRecommendationsContact suppliers directly for quotes based on your project specifications, including tray width, length, material, and duty rating. Ensure compliance with IEC 61537, NEMA VE-1, and Singapore SS249 standards for safety and durability. Consider bulk orders or long-term contracts to reduce per-meter costs.

By evaluating material, duty rating, and supplier options, you can select a cable tray system that balances cost, durability, and compliance for your industrial or commercial project in Singapore.
