Ranking of High Voltage Optical Cable Material Manufacturers

Overview

An authoritative 2026 guide to the top 15 fiber optic manufacturers — from Corning and Prysmian to Fujikura and LS Cable — with headquarters, tech focus, and flagship products.

Key Takeaways

Top high-voltage optical cable manufacturers include Nexans, Prysmian Group, Southwire, LS Cable & System, Furukawa Electric, NKT, and Finolex Cables, recognized for their global reach and advanced HVDC and subsea cable solutions. Leading Manufacturers Overview1. Nexans (France) Nexans is a global leader in cable and optical fiber solutions, active in high-voltage projects, data, telecoms, and industrial applications.

The company is known for advanced HVDC and subsea cable systems, supporting large-scale grid modernization and renewable energy integration. 2. Prysmian Group (Italy) Prysmian is a major player in high-voltage and submarine cable manufacturing, offering turnkey solutions for offshore wind farms, cross-border transmission, and industrial power networks.

Their expertise spans both AC and DC high-voltage systems. 3. Southwire (USA) Southwire dominates the North American market, providing high-voltage cables for utilities, EV infrastructure, and modular data centers.

It is highly rated for domestic supply chain reliability and storm-response logistics, though its European and Asian expansion is slower. 4.

L

S Cable & System (South Korea) LS C&S specializes in HVDC submarine cables and XLPE insulation technology. The company is expanding its offshore wind cable production, including a new facility in Virginia, USA, to serve North American markets. 5.

Furukawa Electric (Japan) Furukawa Electric offers a broad portfolio of high-voltage and optical cables, including submarine HVDC systems. The company has been involved in offshore wind projects and provides repair and spare cable solutions for large-scale installations. 6.

NK

T (Denmark/Germany) NKT supplies high-voltage cable solutions for major corridor projects like SuedLink and SuedOstLink. Their portfolio includes high-end cables and accessories, supporting both onshore and offshore energy infrastructure. 7.

Finolex Cables (India) Finolex is a leading Indian manufacturer of electrical and telecommunication cables, including high-voltage solutions. The company has a strong domestic presence and is expanding its technological capabilities for industrial and infrastructure projects.

Additional Notable Companies

Okonite (USA) – Specializes in insulated wire and cable for industrial and utility applications. Belden (USA) – Produces networking and signal transmission cables for demanding environments. HUBER+SUHNER (Switzerland) – Offers high-performance RADOX® Flex high-voltage cables for industrial and EV applications.

Tratos (Italy) – Manufactures HV cables up to 245 kV, emphasizing flexibility, strength, and low maintenance.

Market Insights

The high-voltage cable market is moderately consolidated, dominated by a few global players with strong engineering capabilities and vertically integrated operations. Key drivers include offshore wind, cross-border transmission, and urban infrastructure upgrades. Companies are increasingly offering integrated energy solutions, advanced insulation technologies, and turnkey EPC services to differentiate themselves in this capital-intensive industry.

These manufacturers are recognized for their technological innovation, global reach, and reliability in high-voltage and optical cable systems, making them the preferred suppliers for utilities, industrial projects, and renewable energy infrastructure worldwide.
